Bulletin T-17 September 1980

FOREWORD

The statistics in this bulletin describe many aspects of Tennessee's farm economy: Most state summary tables begin with 1971; data for earlier years are found in Tennessee Agricultural Statistics, Annual Bulletin, 1975 and Agricultural Trends in Tennessee, 1866-1960.

Estimates in this bulletin are based on (1) 1964, 1969 and 1974 Censuses of Agriculture, (2) sample mail surveys of voluntary reporters (3) area probability and multiple frame surveys in which data are collected by personal interviews, and (4) objective yield surveys in which plant populations and fruiting characteristics are measured for small sample plots.

A list of periodic releases, available without charge, is shown on the last page of this bulletin.

The supplement beginning on page 65 contains summaries of Livestock Market News reports for Tennessee and is provided by the Tennessee Agricultural Extension Service.

This bulletin was edited by Joel Moore, Student Assistant. Typing for offset printing was done by Larue Maxwell. Also contributing were: statisticians Floyd W. Griffith, Burgess F. Guinn, Al Midgett, George Patton, Rick Geesey, Keith Miller, Julie Barzilli and Larry Mauzey: student assistant Hercules Taylor; programmers Charles Majors and Larry Cantrell; and clerical staff members Dru Slinkard, Dartha Roaden, Dorothy Lee, Vandolyn Smith, Darlene Bentley, Kevin Batts, Vickie Pinson, John Gibson, and Mary Young.

Dear Reader:

The Chinese have a saying, "When drinking the water, remember those who dug the well." The users of the statistics in this bulletin are indebted to farmers and businessmen who supplied information on which these official estimates are based.

I salute the public-spirited citizens who responded to sample surveys conducted by the Tennessee Crop Reporting Service. Theirs is the spirit that made this the Volunteer State.

Sincerely,

Jere Griggs

Bulletin T-18 September 1981

FOREWORD

The statistics in this bulletin describe many aspects of Tennessee's farm economy: Most state summary tables begin with 1975; data for earlier years are found in Tennessee Agricultural Statistics, Annual Bulletin, 1975 and Agricultural Trends in Tennessee, 1866-1960

Estimates in this bulletin are based on (1) 1974 and 1978 Censuses of Agriculture, (2) sample mail surveys of voluntary reporters (3) area probability and multiple frame surveys in which data are collected by personal interviews, and (4) objective yield surveys in which plant populations and fruiting characteristics are measured for small sample plots.

A list of periodic releases, available without charge, is shown on the last page of this bulletin.

The supplement beginning on page 79 contains summaries of Livestock Market News reports for Tennessee and is provided by the Tennessee Agricultural Extension Service.

This bulletin was edited by David Allred, Student Assistant. Typing for offset printing was done by Glenda Kuss. Also contributing were: statisticians Floyd W. Griffith, Burgess F. Guinn, Al Midgett, Serial Kenerson, Rick Geesey, Keith Miller, Julie Barzilii and Larry Mauzey; student assistant Hercules Taylor; programmers Charles Majors and Gerald St. Pierre; and clerical staff members Dru Slinkard, Dartha Roaden, Dorothy Lee, Vandolyn Smith, Darlene Bentley, Kevin Batts, Larue Maxwell, John Gibson and Mary Young.

WILLIAM H. WALKER III
Commissioner

September 4, 1981

Dear Reader:

Farming is a rewarding and highly desirable way of life, and it certainly is challenging. Natural elements so vital to a successful harvest, as well as the marketplace, can be filled with uncertainty.

To assist farmers in planning for some of the ever present risks is the primary purpose of the statistics compiled in this bulletin. I frequently send the State Statistician requested survey data for my Haywood County farm. In order that the survey reports can be more meaningful, I urge you to complete and return sample survey questionnaires.

Sincerely,

William H. Walker, III
